THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Whitelaw Reid's Salutatory to the Public CAUTION LEA & PERRIN'S York Tribine will continue its career as an independent journal, and without characteristics. York Tribune will continue its career as an independent journal, and without change in the editorial force,—Whitelaw Reid remaining at the head. The Sinclair combination broke down, and Mr. Orton concluded to do the wisest thing possible. In an elaborate editoral, the Tribune says:

It is now proper to state that as the result of certain intrigues and outside efforts to gain control of the paper, and

A PERFECT BOOT BLACKING! efforts to gain control of the paper, and wrest it from the purpose to which our late chief devoted it, some changes have taken place in the proprietorship, and a large majority of the stockholders are to-day permanently concentrated in the hands of Mr. Greeley's chosen editorial associates, men whom he trained for this particular duty: to whom he intrusted the manageduty; to whom he intrusted the management of his journal in the greatest emergencies; whom he honored with the confidence of his thoughts and wishes, and whose purpose it now is to continue the work from which he was so suddenly called away. Their ambition is to make the Tribune of the future what Horace Greeley would have made it, if he had been spared—a frank and fearless

Made by F. B. RUTLER & CO., Lowell, Mass., and abroad, the progress of science and usoful arts, speaking its mind freely on all questions of public concern, detesting neutrality in politics, the refuge of the weak-minded and timid, but keeping independence as the best title to honor and usefulness. How far our achievement must fall short of our endeavor, missing every hour the strength of that incomparevery hour the strength of that incomparable advocate whom we have lost, none can zealize more fully than ourselves; but we have at least this qualification for our own work, that we have caught something & of his spirit and learned to know his pur-pose. That purpose, as he formally announced it in his latest writing for these columns, was to make his journal more thoroughly than ever the honest and unthoroughly than ever the honest and unfettered champion of Republicanism, reconciliation and peace. ample, that when a few days ago half a million of dellars was paid for the bare control of the paper, we knowing the worth of what Mr. Greeley had built up, determined to bid higher. Making allowance for the fact that the Tribune is practically without improved real estate, this indicates by far the highest price ever paid for a newspaper on this continent. But henceforth there is no price whatever at which any stranger can buy it. It is at which any stranger can buy it. It is beyond reach.
